searched for. Level -309 is not dangerous, as it only has entities from the real world. Level -309 has been forgotten in history, as no one knew this very island was actually here. Wanderers find this island isolation similar for a solitary confinement, though being freely outside, but can also separate you from seeing anything or anyone else. This island is like any other island from the real world, otherwise looking a lot like one. The geography of this level seems to be very high, as the island is about three miles in height.

The Mountains

This island has a mountainous area, which makes it higher than any other normal island, we suppose. This island's immense elevation makes the divine mountainous beauty of the level, having least of a flower, in any size, everywhere. The peaks of this mountainous journey was weathered, like most islands, with time, peace, and isolation. It has seemed the fact that this level just appeared.. out of nowhere. This mountain was in the real world.. too. Confronting that you have to climb this mountain is a great size. This unique challenge prevents wanderers to get out of this level.

The Hills

The hills seem to be the opposite of the mountain, having low ground, imperishable terrain, and a lot of peace. You can feel like the hills aren't the same as the mountains, but it doesn't have the same feeling as the mountains. The entities look just like real life entities in the Frontrooms. The fungi, the ocean reefs, and even fish ceased to exist here. The air is moist, but not alike with the Earth. The climate seems off, and the temperature has changed a lot. This island, is unique. It has tons of geography, and a lot of terrain. Though, despite the feature of this mountainous era, Level -309 seems to have an easy categorization with it's unique blend with the fog, mountains, and, merely itself! The intertwining fog, nature's embodiment, and the mountain peak is very generous to human life. Though, you should gasp for air in the mountainous peaks, as for a wanderer has died on the mountain of the island.

The Fishing Dock

“Fish all you want, as there is nothing, or something to stop you..”
— Note near the Dock.

The Fishing Dock is located at the Northeastern shore of this island. This Fishing Dock has been abandoned and started to rot after the fish were mysteriously disappearing for a small amount of time. Fishermen from the population would gather here, grab their boats, and waited in the calm waters to get the fish that was once here. After 1920, a shadow has since fallen upon the popular dock.

Reports say that this island was actually habitable, but from the environment, now it is not. As stated, you cannot live here, but you can stay here for a short amount of time, or probably a month.

Unknown
Dissapearance

For we still don't know about the disappearance of the wanderers, but has traces been written down in history is still unknown. Level -309 has looked to be stranded as a silent witness to all of the disappearance on the mysterious island. Their disappearance of the wanderers is still unknown. The disappearance of the wanderers serves as a reminder to watch where you are stepping. This also veils the true essence of the island that lies, not just in its physical landscape, but with the untold stories that echo through the mountainous peaks and hills. This is with a poignant reminder of the nature of this island, and the steps of the wanderers, leading to the unknown abyss.

This island used to be a silent island paradise, with a serene beauty. The landscapes were like a painter's masterpiece, rugged cliffs, teal waters, and soft hills. The air was moist, though not like the Frontrooms did. The sound that broke the silence was the cutting of waves shoving into the shore and occasional avalanches. Level -309, had a island splendor to it, with converging mist and with the mountains created an unexplainable island that seemed to exist as paranormal as Earth's islands do. The fog lapsed itself with the clouds, mountains, and snow, like a obsolete veil. It was casting the sky, having hues of yellow-like orange. In those days, the island was a seek for wanderers, having the least amount of danger there was. They would stop and rest between the mountain peak and the low hills, resting from what they accomplished, and did before.

There were no trees, but just a shady silence of mist air. Though, the island was merely all abandoned, they would still take a rest and think of what they were already doing, and what they accomplished just before there was an entrance to this shady mist of an island.

Though, this would all change.. Level -309 is itself, but it is mandatory that you shall not be here for more than a day. For those who dare to tread its corridors, one piece of advice remains steadfast: find an exit quickly, before it catches you.

Entities

This entity is hidden in the shallow pits of the ocean. We do not have a picture, nor a background of the entity. This entity's description has not yet been found, though this entity will never be passive.

Colonies and Outposts

There are, and will never be an outpost or a colony here, since the moist air would be a dead-zone after a day.

Entrances

A 30% chance of a door with a head title saying "WASTELAND" appearing in a negative level will lead you here.
